I’m not someone who tears others down because I have zero talent. I have zero talent and I feel good when others succeed well at something I suck at. That’s not what this is about though. I recently came across a young man from Sweden who was a nice catalog of cover songs and originals. He’s done tours, signed a record deal and has millions of fans worldwide, and he’s only 12. Quite impressive I might say. I don’t even know what I was doing at 12 that’s how unimpressive my childhood was. So clearly the kid has talent and a huge heart and I genuinely wish him all the best.

To be clear, this is not an attack on this kid. Elites under liberalism have a weird ability to rail against the very system they profit from. Sadly, the climate debate is no exception. You can’t be concerned about the planet but then sending aid to Africa so the population hits 4 billion in a few generations. The priorities of man are betrayed by his actions, not his words. You see among young people entering the elite celebrity class, as a rite of passage needing to signal their virtue to various leftist causes. In all cases, nothing is solved.

For example, Oscar is a supporter of Fridays for Future, whose stated goals are the following:

> Keep the global temperature rise below 1.5 °C compared to pre-industrial levels.
>
> Ensure climate justice and equity.
>
> Listen to the best united science currently available.
>
> Follow the Paris Agreement.

Let me sum this up platform up for you in case it isn't clear: we're virtue signaling twats who will never challenge anything on a fundamental level, but we do recite platitudes that make us feel better.

We hate war, but let's dance with bush. We hate climate change, but capitalism is great. We hate overpopulation, but only for Whites. We hate sexism, except when its Weinstein or Epstein. We hate racism, except when Obama does nothing for black people. We hate Trump, except that he is one of us. And that my dear readers, is the essence of their hatred for Trump. Trump isn't against them, he is them! And he, in the most disgusting and boorish ways, reminds their agonizing consciences of their own emptiness. Our elites are fake and weak. They don't care about the planet; they'd raped it a thousand times over if it meant they could keep their penthouses.

In short, I blame the adults in the room. But then again, this kid will be one shortly, so that's it.
